FULL HOUSE RESORTS PROVIDES UPDATE ON PROPOSED TERRE HAUTE LEGISLATION

LAS VEGAS - February 17, 2017 - On December 21, 2016, Indiana State Senator Jon Ford announced that he would introduce a bill into the state legislature that would permit Full House Resorts (NASDAQ: FLL) to relocate some of its permitted but underutilized gaming capacity from Rising Sun to Terre Haute. Full House indicated that, if the proposed legislation passed, it would build an entertainment venue estimated to cost between $100 million and $150 million. This entertainment venue would result in an incremental 1,250 jobs in the Terre Haute area. The proposal was backed by Mayor Duke Bennett, Terre Haute City Council, Vigo County Commissioners, Vigo County Council, the Terre Haute Chamber of Commerce, and many other civic and community organizations.

Yesterday, the Public Policy Committee of the Indiana State Senate voted 5-5 regarding the bill. Because the bill did not receive a majority, it failed to advance within the Senate.

“We are disappointed in yesterday’s committee vote,” stated Daniel R. Lee, President and Chief Executive Officer of Full House Resorts. “Some 23 years ago, Indiana legalized a specific number of casinos along its borders, at a time when there were few casinos in Illinois and none in Ohio. Today, the state’s gaming capacity is largely located in areas that do not maximize the state’s jobs and tax revenues. Senator Ford’s bill was a win-win proposal, where we would continue to operate and improve our Rising Sun casino, while making a large investment in a new location that would generate incremental jobs and tax revenues, and attract significant visitation from out-of-state. By relocating existing permitted capacity, we can create jobs and incremental tax revenues without an expansion of the state’s permitted gaming capacity. Despite yesterday’s disappointing committee vote, we intend to continue to pursue the Terre Haute proposal, as well as other opportunities that will benefit both Full House and the State of Indiana.”

Separately, Full House indicated that it plans to break ground on a 56-space RV park on February 28, 2017 at the Rising Star Casino Resort in Rising Sun, demonstrating its continuing commitment to that community. The RV park is expected to open in May 2017. The Recreation Vehicle Industry Association estimates that more than 60% of recreation vehicles are made in Indiana. Despite this, Rising Star’s RV park will be the first RV park at a casino in the region.
